

A 12-MONTH MONEY SYSTEM

THE BUDGET RESET

Budget · Debt Payoff · Savings — Undated Printable Planner

How This Planner Works

This planner is a system, not a diary. It runs on one monthly ritual and three habits. Every page is undated, so print what you need, when you need it — the Monthly Budget and Expense Log pages are designed to be printed twelve times each. Nothing here requires an app, a spreadsheet, or a subscription.

1

Take the snapshot

Fill in the Money Snapshot once. It is your before photo — be honest, not optimistic.

2

Budget monthly

On the last weekend of each month, print a fresh Monthly Budget page and give every dollar a job.

3

Log as you spend

Keep the Expense Log where you will see it. A budget you never check against reality is a wish.

4

Attack one debt

List every debt, order them smallest to largest, and aim every spare dollar at the first one only.

The one rule that makes this work:

When you blow the budget — and some month you will — you do not quit, and you do not wait for January. You print a fresh page and start the next month clean. Consistency beats perfection by a very wide margin.

Bill Payment Tracker

Year: _____

List every recurring bill with its due day, then tick the month box when it is paid.

One glance tells you what is still outstanding — no more late fees.

Expense Log

Every purchase gets a line, same day it happens. This page is the difference between a budget and a guess.

Debt Inventory

Date: _____

Every debt goes on this page — cards, loans, car, medical, the one you would rather not write down. You cannot pay off a number you refuse to look at.

“Payoff #” is the order you will attack them — smallest balance first. Rank them on the next page.

THE METHOD

Debt Snowball Plan

Order your debts smallest balance to largest. Pay minimums on everything, then aim every spare dollar at debt #1. When it dies, its whole payment rolls into debt #2 — the snowball. Momentum is the strategy: quick wins keep you in the game long enough for the math to work.

Debt Payoff Tracker

One row per debt

Each bar is one debt. Split it into ten equal chunks of the starting balance and shade a segment every time you knock out a chunk. Stick it on the fridge — visible progress is what keeps a payoff alive in month seven.

Sinking Funds

Save small, monthly

Christmas, car repairs, and annual insurance are not emergencies — they are scheduled. Give each one a fund, set aside a little every month, and tick the month when you have funded it.

Do this twice a year

Go through your last two bank statements and list every recurring charge — streaming, apps, memberships, the gym you have not visited since March. Then decide, line by line: keep it or cancel it. Most households find real money here.

30-Day No-Spend Challenge

For thirty days, nothing but the essentials you define below. Mark every clean day. A no-spend month will not fix your finances — it exists to show you how much of your spending is habit rather than need.
